

FCC must continue to oversee that large telecoms serve smaller, local independent ISPs. Such 'locals' are vital to choice, diversity and an accountability to users, plus they preserve a deterrent to centralized tyranny. Their employees live where they operate. Corporations have no soul and the larger they are, the more so.